Important Statement.

There is no other means in this section whereby the business interests and activities can more easily and cheaply bring themselves in touch with the people from whom business derives its support than through The Yorkville Inquirer. There is not a county in the south that possesses a more widely read newspaper than The Yorkville Inquirer, nor a newspaper for which the people as a whole have a higher respect, or in which there is more confidence. Those people who are of the opinion that the publication of this paper will result in their ability to make a still better and more valuable medium of public information, and such appreciation will prove of tenfold more advantage to the people who avail themselves of the paper than those who do not. The people of the county as a whole.
